DID YOU KNOW?
Brown butter is prepared by slowly heating melted butter until any water in the butter has evaporated, and the milk fat solids begin to brown and caramelize. The result will be a nutty and deeply flavored butter that can be used to prepare a pan sauce or even in baking.

Let’s get cooking! Flip me over.
Fill a saucepot with water, place it onto the stovetop, and bring to a boil. Season the water with a large pinch of salt.

Use your fingers to pick the sage leaves from stems.

When the water is boiling, lower the heat to medium. Add the butternut squash ravioli into the pot of water. Gently stir, and cook for 5-7 min, or until the ravioli reach your desired doneness.

Meanwhile, place a nonstick saute pan onto the stovetop, add 1 tbsp. of cooking oil, and set the heat to medium. When the oil is hot, add the rainbow Swiss chard to the pan. Be careful of any oil splatter. Season with salt and pepper. Cook for 2-3 min, or until wilted. Then turn off the heat, spoon into a small bowl, and set aside.

Next, make the sage brown butter sauce which requires full attention and patience:

Return the pan to the stovetop, and set the heat to medium. Add the butter into the pan, and stir until melted. Gently swirl the pan to dissipate any foam as it forms in the butter.

As the butter foam begins to clear and the milk solids brown, add the whole sage leaves, pecan pieces (omit for tree nut allergies), and golden raisins. Cook for 1-2 min, gently stirring the pan, until the sage leaves begin to crisp.

When the butternut squash ravioli reach your desired doneness, first reserve ¼ cup of pasta water from the pot. Strain the ravioli from the water and spoon into the pan with the brown butter sauce.

Return the rainbow Swiss chard into the pan and gently stir together. Add spoonfuls of the pasta water as desired with crumbled shaved parmesan cheese, to create a pan sauce for the ravioli. Turn off the heat.

Let’s plate: spoon the butternut squash ravioli, rainbow chard, and the brown butter sauce onto the serving plates.
